

COVID-19 Vaccinations and Your Workforce

Conducting a Global Risk Assessment

As we enter a new phase of vaccinating against COVID-19, can employers protect their workforce by requiring employees to be vaccinated before a return to the workplace? For multinational employers, this raises legal issues across the globe and a careful assessment will need to be made.

KEY ISSUES FOR EMPLOYERS

- Prohibition – is there a prohibition against a requirement that employees be vaccinated? Even if there is no prohibition, can an employer take lawful disciplinary action for failure to vaccinate?
- Discrimination – could a requirement to vaccinate discriminate against certain groups on the grounds of religious belief or non-religious belief systems?
- Privacy – how should sensitive employee vaccination data be handled and stored? For what purposes can the data be shared with other employees? Can the data be used for any disciplinary action?
- Justification – can a requirement to be vaccinated be lawful taking into account the sector and industry, and the nature of the workplace?

HOW CAN WE HELP?

- Assessing local laws and whether a requirement to vaccinate can be lawfully justified given the health and safety objectives, and enabling a safe return to the workplace.
- Assessing any potential exposure and the practical risks for your business, including reputational risks.
- Providing clear practical advice with recommendations.
